The British Red Cross gives skilled and impartial care to people in need and in crisis. However well we prepare for life, a single event can change everything. A house fire can leave a family homeless and with nothing. An earthquake can bring a whole country to its knees. At the Red Cross we believe in respect for other human beings and in meeting suffering with care and understanding. We care for people in their own homes and in local communities, at home and abroad, in peace and in war.

People need the Red Cross today more than ever. Here in the UK the British Red Cross educates people in life-saving skills, enabling them to respond to future emergencies in their communities. We work with the most vulnerable to provide care and support when there is no one else to turn to, and this is only made possible through our large network of dedicated and experienced volunteers.

Across the world, the number of natural disasters has almost doubled in the past decade, and we are currently seeing the catastrophic effects of this in both Myanmar (Burma) and China. Conflicts are also having an ever-greater impact on the lives of civilians. No matter what the disaster is, whether natural or man made, within hours emergency response teams from the UK can be dispatched anywhere in the world to save lives by providing essential aid such as food, shelter, seeds, tools and clean water and then we help to re-build these lives.

The Red Cross is a symbol of hope and protection to millions of people both here in the UK and around the world, and the annual London Christmas Fair is an important event for us to raise the funds needed to continue our vital work. Your generous support is very greatly appreciated.
